C.C.'S PAY HONOR TO DEAD OF ORDER

Attend Impressive Services for 32 Departed Members.

Tribute to the memory of 32 departed members of Carroll Council 596, Knights of Columbus, was paid in an impressive memorial service at the E. C. clubhouse, Sunday afternoon, attended by 300 members. The ceremonies were conducted by Grand Knight A. J. Wilbur, assisted by other officers. The service was opened with the playing of "Requiem" on the organ by Frank L. Gleason.

"Lead Kindly Light" was sung by the Knights of Columbus choir. Rev. Dean E. P. Ryan gave the invocation and the choir sang the opening ode, "Rock of Ages."

The roll call of officers and deceased brothers was given by Thomas Dugan, recorder, and Theodore Dugan, treasurer. The deceased are: John H. Dugan, James McCaffrey, Thomas F. Heaney, Rev. E. M. McGinnis, James Ryan, John J. O'Brien, C. J. MacInnes, J. P. O'Brien, John R. Traub, Michael P. Hayes, John Collins, E. Dennis W. Hayes, Joseph P. Dugan, Edward C. Ryan, Hugh M. Flaherty, Rev. E. P. Ryan, Morris Nelson, Paul Kelly, Allen Crane, J. Francis Murphy, John Campbell, Henry A. Gucken, William Monaghan, E. E. Conway, William Monaghan, Francis D. McCue, Francis Cunningham and John Kolb.

Edmund J. Leary sang a solo which was followed by the choir. The service was given by Rev. W. P. McDermott, Evansville, and the eulogy of the departed brothers by J. J. Cunningham, pastor district deputy. "Auld Melodies" were sung by the choir and the closing ceremonies were conducted by the officers. Supplication and benediction were given by Dean Ryan and the closing ode, "Rock of Ages," was sung by the choir and the entire council.

"MESSIAH" IS BIG COMMUNITY AFFAIR

Oratorio Here, Wednesday Night, Marks New Epoch in Local Music

A combined chorus of 255 voices from Janesville and Milton, assisted by the noted singers from away, will produce Handel's "Messiah," the greatest oratorio ever written, at Milton, Tuesday night. The Janesville chorus is composed of 150 voices, and the Milton chorus of 105. The performance, starting at eight o'clock, this presentation marks a new epoch in music in the city, as it is the first time many years that a community chorus of this size has given a presentation here. It has brought the music lovers of the city closer together in their practical and has started a revival of musical interest, which, it is hoped, will result in more productions of the type of "The Messiah."

Artists who will sing the solo parts are: Wilfred Quinlan, Wilfred McGowan, James Hamilton and Albert Borroff. They are all singers of note from larger cities, some of them having sung in the famous Lincoln Center in this oratorio. Miss Quinlan sings soprano; Mrs. McGowan, alto; Mr. Hamilton, tenor; and Mr. Borroff, bass.

The Janesville chorus is composed of the best singers of the city who responded to the call sent out when the presentation was first planned. The Milton chorus is from the college and has had much musical training; Prof. L. B. Stringer of that college is leader.

Edgerton

Frank Russell, Correspondent.

Edgerton.—Col. Alvin Alder, well known Edgerton citizen, died suddenly of heart trouble Sunday afternoon, after a half hour of illness. He had not been well for a year, but his death was entirely unexpected. Col. Alder was a famous hunter and cook. He kept a cottage at Lake Koshkonong, where he often entertained his friends. He had just closed the cottage and filled the office of his winter, his usual custom, to make his home with his daughter, Mrs. Will Vivian, and his son, Leo. He was almost 70 years old, and leaves a wife, Mrs. Edgerton, and two daughters, Mrs. Francis Addie, Whitewater, and Mrs. John Forncrook, Eugene, Ore., and the son and daughter in Edgerton. Col. Alder had held the office of junior vice commander of the state encampment during the Civil war and was an enthusiastic member of the G. A. R., having served as adjutant of the H. S. Swift post here for several years. He had held the office of junior vice commander of the state encampment during the Civil war and was an enthusiastic member of the G. A. R., having served as adjutant of the H. S. Swift post here for several years.

The funeral will be conducted at 1:30 p. m. Wednesday in the Congregational church and interment will be at Oak Hill cemetery. Many of his relatives are buried there.

Several more persons have joined the night school and will start work after the holidays. The class in business law has members from the shorthand class, four typing, 17 bookkeeping, 12 sewing, 27 French, 8 and business English, 38.

Richard Aftel was taken to the Janesville hospital Friday, suffering with diphtheria.

POSITIONS THAT PAY WELL AND ARE ALWAYS TO BE HAD.

The perfecting of typesetting key-boards has brought new and unusual opportunities in the printing business, the business that gives development to great minds.

Positions of this kind always have paid well and perhaps always will, and doubtless they will always be plentiful, because the printing business expands as civilization develops. Anybody who could learn to operate a typewriter can learn to operate a typesetting machine. If you want to learn how to do the work of a monotype machinist, if you want to learn to do the work of a galley proof setter, if you want to learn the work of the business office—if you want to get into a work that will always pay you well, and if you can spare three to four months for preparation, write for Prospectus to American Publishers and Southern Publishers TYPE-SETTING DEPARTMENT OF THE GEORGIA-ALABAMA BUSINESS COLLEGE, Macon, Ga.

THE COAL STRIKE IN KANSAS.
Many paradoxical features mark the strike at the coal mines in Kansas. The men who are striking are not members of the miners' union.
Union men want to work and are asking protection of the troops of the state, to permit them to go to work. The strikers are those who have followed Alexander Howat from the union. The women who have been active in rioting and have held meetings of protest, who have picketed the mines and made it impossible with weapons of red pepper and missiles for the union miners, to nine coal, are the alien wives of alien miners who have refused to abide by the orders of Lewis, president of the National miners union. So we have the strange anomaly of union men calling on the state to protect them in their effort to work. It is an almost unheard of condition. For more than a year Kansas has been torn by strikes and labor agitation growing out of the leadership of Howat. The court of industrial relations of the state has had the question of the strike and labor conditions in the mines between the state and labor agitation growing out of the fore it for nearly two years. Its decision has been upheld by the national miners' body but Howat refused to abide by any decision either of the court or his superior officers in the union. And what seems to be worse, there is no settlement in sight so long as the "outlaw" as-tigators are at work.

On Monday morning in Milwaukee there are two classes of people as one may discover by reading the list of auto victims—the quick and the dead.

AMATEUR BUTCHERS KILLING THE TREES.
About this time of the year and again in the spring the tree butcher with his saw and axe gets in his deadly work. The unusual method of procedure is to cut off every branch in sight. Then in climbing trees to do the work, some of the butchers wear spikes or spurs. One of the greatest assets in Janesville, and the same may be said of many cities and villages in the state, is the tree bordered avenue and street. Hundreds of trees have been ruined by the spikes in the heels of men climbing around to place telephone wires.
Perhaps not one of these men ever stopped to think of the damage or even knew what wounds he was making on the tree. These spikes, thrust through the bark and sap streak of the tree, become centers of decay and infection, marring and in some cases undoubtedly killing the tree which the owner fondly hopes to save. They are to the tree what an infected wound is to a human being.

All this reparatory tree-climbing should be done with ropes, and the branches removed in such a way as to give nature a chance to repair the wound that has been inflicted. Nature will do that, if she has a chance. Do not suffer the trees to be climbed with spurs or spikes, nor their branches to be sawed off a la stump, or at a slant. If possible get an expert to do the work. If that is not practicable, go to the Arnold Arboretum or to the State Forestry Department and procure a simple illustrated statement of the proper manner of pruning, and follow its directions faithfully.

Better no tree at all than a tree which is going to be a melancholy and life-long wreck, as it will be, if having suffered the loss of branches, it is butchered by a person ignorant or careless of the principles of the tree's life and growth.

T. O'Connor's trail is marked well with cor-ner's inquests.

THE FINAL BUSTING OF THE BUBBLE.
According to the report of the receiver for the Cooperative Society of America, that altruistic scheme by which all the people were to make themselves rich, the millions of dollars paid in have been dissipated and there is left $16 in the treasury. Eventually those who invested will lose their money with the exception of the few dollars which the receiver may save. It is another one of those cases where all the warnings of the newspapers avail nothing. Men invested in this in the face of the facts that it was clearly shown that it was a questionable gamble. Some one is

CHINA'S DEBTS

By FREDERICK J. HASKIN

Washington, D. C.—That China's foreign financial obligations should be placed in the same category as other international indebtedness, in case there is hereafter a readjustment of the same or an international moratorium, is a claim which is now being strongly put forward by China's friends. It is forecast that this claim for the same financial status as the other powers will be pressed by the Chinese delegation, and that may have American support. This maneuver has the advantage that it would most effectively test the good faith of the European powers in regard to China, and would place the United States Government in a very strong tactical position.

It is pointed out that much has been said by the representatives of the principal European powers, about the advisability of declaring a European moratorium—that is, such of the allied nations concerned as it is of their debts to the others. In effect, this would mean that the United States would pay for the war. Truly, the nations participating in the conference owe the United States government $12,000,000,000. The interest on this debt is nearly $2,000,000,000 a day, none of which is being paid. For the United States to cancel this huge debt has been described (by a European diplomat) as a magnificent gesture.

The advantages of this magnificent gesture to the European nations are self-evident. It is claimed that the cancellation of this debt would also be of advantage to the United States, because the European nations, relieved of this burden of debt, would be able to buy goods, trade would receive and currencies would be stabilized.

Some observers say that this alleged advantage to us is not so obvious. It would be just like a storekeeper giving his customers the money with which to buy his goods, which is in effect the same as giving them the goods in the first place. Besides, after the storekeeper has given the customer the money, there is nothing to prevent the customer from going across the street and spending it at another store.

Not again, it is evident that disarmament is not going very far. France will keep her big army, England will keep most of her capital ships, and so will Japan. This means that the people of the United States, if the debt is canceled, will in effect be paying in taxes out of their pockets for the armaments of the other nations as well as that of their own.

All of these considerations tend to make the cancellation proposal somewhat unpopular in this country. But a phase of it which has never got much consideration is that China seems not to be considered in connection with it at all.

China also is one of the allies that won the war. She also owes a large foreign debt, though not nearly as large as the European nations owe. If there is to be a general forgiving of debts, why should not China be included in the process? If the United States is to let off the European powers, why should not they let off China?

China's foreign debt is roughly $1,500,000,000. Of this amount about $350,000,000 is for indemnities, mostly due to the Boxer uprising in 1900. The United States long ago forgave China this debt, but the other powers have never done so. About $250,000,000 is still due on this ancient and dubious account to Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan, Belgium and Russia. China has already more than paid for the actual damage done to foreign life and property in that uprising.

The powers participating in the conference have already agreed to a readjustment of all foreign concessions in China, in accordance with the ten points of the Chinese proposals and the four points of the proposals of the American Government.

Now it is suggested that the American Government propose to the powers that they submit all their monetary claims against China, and all concessions in China from which China wants to be relieved, and which are in violation of the open-door policy, to the appraisal of an international commission of experts. When the total amount of China's debt has been ascertained, it is suggested that the United States credit this amount against the debts which the powers owe to the American government. In this way the Chinese indebtedness would all be transferred to America. Then, if the United States wanted to readjust its foreign loans on a basis of cancellation, or on any other basis, China would be included.

The strength of such a proposal is obvious. The United States, by reason of its financial strength and the extent to which the other nations are in debt to it, is in a position to make such a proposal very firmly and to make many other advantages which the European nations seek contingent upon its acceptance. It is also very hard to see what arguments against such a proposal could be brought forward by the other powers.

Such an arrangement, by removing from China the network of concessions and mortgages in that American policy in regard to China could be effectively carried out, and that if that policy were sound and enlightened, a considerable part of the Far Eastern problem would have been solved.

well to this ancient and honorable game he will be ready for a place in the sun.

Pink Carter is dead and Alabama tosses a sprig of willow on the grave. Pink was the most un-reconstructed and bitter of unreconstructed rebels. He erected a monument to the memory of John Wilkes Booth in his yard, with the inscription, "For the Killing of Old Lincoln." But war memories and bitterness fade and the new generation refused to permit this insult to be flaunted, so the neighbors destroyed the monument a few years ago much to the disgust of Pink Carter, and to the glory of decent humanity.

China has a consortium. Germany wants a consortium and America on Christmas will have a hippopotamus.

Radical attacks are now being made on the state university because the college of agriculture has called the conference to be held there on January 31, "Farm Bureau Day" and has especially invited every one interested in the American Farm Bureau Federation to be present. It certainly would not have called for any criticism if the college of agriculture had invited the non-partisan league.

It will be a rare treat to hear something besides Bolshevik music when the oratorio of Messiah is sung. Jazz is a cross between Chinese and a proletarian revolution.

Those educated financiers who swapped Liberty bonds for German marks at 7 cents a mark look upon the 100 per cent Liberty bond market as a conspiracy of the capitalist class against them.

After the first of the year we might have a conference to scrap Old Maryland along with the battleships.

Having set the example of protecting mail cars, why may not the government put a guard to halt robbery in the dining cars?

Maybe we will have a white Christmas after all.

WONDERING.
Wonder if I washed my face and hands and brushed my hair?

An' set right sight through supper time an'
did not leave my coat on the floor?

If Santa Claus would notice it an' be so glad he'd say:

"I guess I'll give him everything he's asked for Christmas day."

Wonder if I tried to be good as I can be?

An' mother didn't have to speak a second time to me?

But what to come in from play or send me up to bed?

If Santa Claus would notice it an' bring along a sled.

I haven't been so awful good for months
an' months, I know.

I've done a lot I shouldn't do, but couldn't help it though.

But now I wonder if I tried to mind my p's an' q's.

If Santa Claus would notice it an' bring those skating shoes.

To say he thinks it's rather late to start in being a good boy.

But Christmas isn't here just yet, an' maybe he'll wait.

Just start in now an' keep it up till Christmas day, I might say.

Get Santa Claus to notice me an' fix things up all right.

Tonight I'll wash my hands an' face an'
brush my hair.

An' hang my coat an' hat up, too, an' won't set back my chair.

Of stuff my mouth too full of food or on the table sprawl.

An' maybe Santa Claus will fill my stocking after all.

SYNOPSIS

Thrown out of a job in his father's livery stable because of failure, George Marton becomes a wrangler for Old Planter, rich and arrogant. The youth falls in love with Sylvia Planter, and when she falls from her horse, he kisses her. This brings on a fight. Marton leaves, goes to Princeton and determines on a college education. He makes the football team, studies with intense devotion and the aid of a tutor, George Baily.

He faced her picture with his eyes resolute, his jaw thrust out. "I'll do it," he told the lifeless print. "I'll make you know me. I'll teach your brother not to treat me as a servant who has forgotten his place."

The last, in any case, couldn't be safely put off. Lambert's manner had already aroused Betty's interest. Had she known his cause, she might not have reacted so sweetly for George. There was no point in fretting any more. His mind was made up to challenge at the earliest possible moment. In furtherance of this, he decided to leave on the next day, and during the evening called at the Baily's. He came straight to the point.

"I want some dancing lessons," he said. "Do you know anybody?"

Betty looked up, put her hands on George's shoulder, and studied him. "Is this traceable to Wadsworth?"

"No. To what I told you last summer."

"He's going to Betty Alston's dance," Mrs. Baily cried. "If I'm asked," George admitted, "but as a general principle—"

Mrs. Baily interrupted, assuming control.

"Move that table and the chairs," she directed the two boys. "I'm thinking music hidden away between grand opera records. It will come in handy now."

George protested, but she had her own way. Baily sat by, putting at his pipe, at first scornful.

"I hate to see a football player pirouetting like a clown while he was up teaching lessons," he said. "I'll illustrate steps, his cheeks flushed, his cold pipe dangling from his lips."

"You dance very well as it is," Mrs. Baily quipped. "You do need a little quieting. You must learn to remember that the ballroom isn't a grid-iron and your partner a tortoise."

And at the end of a fortnight she told him he was tamed and ready for the sort and perfumed exercise of the dance floor.

To be afraid Betty wouldn't remember her invitation had been a refusal. Her response almost a refusal. On free afternoon Goodhue and he often ran together, trying to keep in the condition already feeling that the outcome of next year's big games would depend on them. They trotted openly through the Alston place, hoping for a glimpse of Betty. When she saw them from the house she would come out and chat for a time, her yellow cheeks straying in the wind. During these brief conferences it was clear that George would go up with Goodhue, and be a guest at his home the night before coming to Princeton. At any moment he might.

The Goodhue house was uptown between Fifth and Madison avenues. It was as unexpected to George as Wadsworth's green study. The size of its halls and rooms, the tasteful extravagance of its decorations, the quiet, liveried servants took his breath. It was difficult not to say so. He told himself he was unjust, as unjust as Sylvia, but the contempt persisted.

There were details here more compelling than anything he had seen or dreamed at Oakmont. The entire household seemed to move according to a feudal pattern. Goodhue's father and mother welcomed George, because their son had brought him, with a quiet assurance. Mrs. Goodhue, George felt, might even appreciate what he was doing. That was the outstanding, the feudal, quality of her. They had an air of unprejudiced judgment of removal from any selfish struggle, of being placed beyond question.

Goodhue and George dined at a club that night. They saw Wadsworth and Dalrymple, the latter flushed and talking louder than he should have done in an affected voice. They went to the theatre, and afterwards drove up Fifth avenue to Betty's party. George was dazzled, and every moment conscious of the effort to present himself as a notable. His excitement increased as he came to the famous establishment in the large ballroom of which Betty was waiting.

There he was at last, handing his hat and coat up to one who, he observed, he felt a great contempt. He told himself he was unjust, as unjust as Sylvia, but the contempt persisted.

There were details here more compelling than anything he had seen or dreamed at Oakmont. The entire household seemed to move according to a feudal pattern. Goodhue's father and mother welcomed George, because their son had brought him, with a quiet assurance. Mrs. Goodhue, George felt, might even appreciate what he was doing. That was the outstanding, the feudal, quality of her. They had an air of unprejudiced judgment of removal from any selfish struggle, of being placed beyond question.

Goodhue and George dined at a club that night. They saw Wadsworth and Dalrymple, the latter flushed and talking louder than he should have done in an affected voice. They went to the theatre, and afterwards drove up Fifth avenue to Betty's party. George was dazzled, and every moment conscious of the effort to present himself as a notable. His excitement increased as he came to the famous establishment in the large ballroom of which Betty was waiting.

Dinner Stories

Maybe you think Editor Hibbs of the Lebanon Times and pastor of the Christian church in that town, wasn't a busy man last week. First he started off by welcoming a new boy baby at his home, then officiated at three weddings in a row. Thursday his mangle machine turned turtle and broke a ball wheel and refused to run afterwards. There the office was, with the paper due next day and no type up. In this crisis, Mr. Hibbs hopped into his trusty Ford, came over to this office and got his type set over to his home on Friday evening. Nothing short of an earthquake will stop the average country editor.

The high school seniors were rehearsing their class play and the bride and bridegroom had come on the stage. After their sentimental little scene they proceeded to sit down at the breakfast table while the amateur comedian did his turn. And straightway the bridegroom grew interested in the make-believe food and didn't even look at his bride. Then the director knew something was wrong. "Here, you bridegroom," he shouted. "What's the matter? You're not paying any attention to your bride! She's tired of her already!"

The bridegroom looked and became confused. "Oh, I forgot this was a play," he stammered.

Farm Bureau News

Bureau Shows How to Boost Milk Sales at Exposition

(Official Bureau News)
The Wisconsin Farm Bureau had two booths at the Wisconsin State Exposition held recently in Milwaukee. One booth was devoted to the display of Virginia wool products and the other was used for advertising and sale of milk and milk products.

The last booth was called the "milk" booth with special milk displays. The idea of increasing milk consumption through increased sale of milk as a drink has long been a goal of the county. There were offered the Holstein High-Ball, Guernsey Flap, Yorkshire Ale, Northern Shaker and the Jersey Julep.

The booth opened up a method for milk producers to think about increased sales.

"Drink milk and be healthy," signs like these, the bureau believed, should be placed in every eating place in the state.

Improvement Market
A number of the annual reports of the bureau, secretary of the American Farm Bureau, have been received at the state headquarters and will be mailed out to the county Farm Bureaus.

Want Better Credits
The more equitable representation of agriculture on the governing boards of the Federal Reserve banking system is being urged by the national Farm Bureau and its state branches.

The national association of commissioners and secretaries of agriculture during the recent meeting in Chicago, a larger discretionary power of the federal reserve banks in extension of credit to farmers is sought.

The federal reserve act was passed to support and stabilize agriculture as well as commerce and industry but in its operation it has failed miserably to sustain agriculture," reads the resolution.

To Standardize Farm Machinery

(Official Bureau News)
A committee of four on standardization of farm machinery is being appointed by the American Farm Bureau Federation. The appointment of the committee was requested by a conference in the general offices of the American Farm Bureau, December 2.

In addition to the Farm Bureau, the National Association of Farm Equipment Manufacturers, the National Implement and Machine Dealers Association, and the American Association of Agricultural Engineers had representatives at the conference.

The committee was instructed to work out a program of development for standardizing farm machinery and to report to a larger meeting of all groups interested in effecting standardization savings of farm implement costs.

New Farm Freight Schedule Ordered With Ten Percent Cut

(Official Bureau News)
Downward revision of freight rates is resulting from the continued work by the American Farm Bureau Federation. There has been no let-up by the bureau in demanding lower rates on farm produce during the last year.

The Interstate Commerce commission has authorized the carriers to make a general reduction of 10 per cent on basic farm products, effective at once. This is the first general reduction of basic commodities ever effected in the United States.

The reduction is to be established and maintained for a period of six months throughout the country, except New England. This is to serve as a test.

The American Farm Bureau has led all other interests of the country in getting the railroads to share in this after-the-war reconstruction period.

This recent cut is after a reduction ordered by the commission and demanded by the bureau which amounted to $4,000,000 on livestock and $10,000,000 on grains, followed in December by the additional wholesale reduction.

Stop Investments in Coop Societies

Within the last six months kindred of farmers in Southern Wisconsin have been solicited and urged to invest in stock and subscribe to the Co-operative Society of America or the Wisconsin Rockdale company.

According to reports, issued from the court, the total free assets of the Co-operative Society is but $16 in cash out of the $11,835 paid in by the holders of "beneficial certificates" and other papers issued by the company.

Search is being made by the central trustee company, appointed receiver for the organization, for the missing millions.

From the start investments in the Chicago Co-operative society and Rockdale companies, officers for which were opened in both Janesville and Beloit, were partially blocked by the Farm Bureau. Farmers were warned against the scheme, of the stock and those heading the advice saved considerable money.

Suits have been started in the Rock county circuit court to recover sums invested by Janesville men and women.

A total of $10,000,000 is alleged to be involved in the reorganization of the Chicago company and subsidiaries.

Stock Sales Pavilion Now Contemplated

Establishing of a new sales pavilion in the Samson building on East Milwaukee and Bluff streets, now leased by the Hower City-Implement company, is being considered by the committee in charge of the four-Duro-Jersey sales to be held in this city in January and February.

Decision whether the sales will be held in the downtown building or in one of the fair ground buildings will be made this week.

A downtown sales pavilion is one of the greatest needs of the farmers in Rock county; since the fair grounds have been successfully used in the past.

Guernsey Men to Hold Meeting

BRINGING UP FATHER

Badgers Show Better in Win Over Ripon

Madison—Wisconsin university's basketball team Saturday routed Ripon, 27 to 17, in a speedy game packed with thrills. It looked like an entirely different team from the one that lost the night before to Pat Farn's Butler college aggregation.

The Badgers, playing lightened considerably, only six fouls were called on them during the contest. Ripon's shooting was poor, and the Badgers made two for the invaders.

"Rollie" Williams came near spoiling the fame of Gustin by preventing the brilliant all-around athlete who for a number of years has been burning things up in the Little Five conference, from scoring a single point. Besides hanging to the Ripon forward whenever he came near having a chance to score, Williams played a dashing floor game.

Lampert Put on Games Body of Pin Meet

The higher was a real one, Elkhorn Janesville on the executive committee of the Wisconsin State Bowling association, is one of the officials selected to have charge of the games at the 20th annual state pin tournament at Madison in January.

Lampert has become one of the important men in Badger bowling circles in the past few years.

The board of directors of the Janesville bowling association will hold a special meeting at the Gazette office at 8 p. m. Tuesday to take preliminary steps to organize a 1922 bowling meet campaign. Orders were given the printer Monday to get out placards calling upon Janesville to get behind the move to bring the meet with its $25,000 in business and 4,000 bowlers here for the 21st annual tournament.

In conjunction with Assemblyman Frank Prescott of Milwaukee, the effort campaign throughout the state boosting Janesville for 1922 has been started. The first wallon was launched in Milwaukee Sunday.

Efforts will be made to send all Janesville teams to Madison on the day when the tournament city is to be chosen. Publicity will be spread in Madison during the 1922 meet. Janesville's strongest argument is that bowling in Southern Wisconsin needs boosting. Although Green Bay wants the meet, that city laid its three years ago whereas Janesville has never had it.

William F. Penske, secretary of the state association is expected to come here this week to present the matter to local organizations.

BLOUIN AND MARINO LEAD $2,000 PIN MATCH

Chicago—Jimmy Blouin and Hank Marino of Chicago, were Monday pins ahead of the American League and Chicago Trucks of Philadelphia in their challenge bowling match for a $2,000 side bet. The last block of the local games will be rolled Monday afternoon.

Rockford Cats Arch Backs for Win Over Cards

Rockford, Ill.—Rockford gets its long desired chance to take a fall out of Janesville in basketball Wednesday night when Chester Langenslein leads the Lions for Cats, into the land of the Lakota Cardinals.

Langenslein, formerly a Northwestern University star, coached Monmouth University last year, and will return to the land of the shreded yokes at the close of the basketball season. The big guard is perhaps the heaviest player on middle western floors today, but he is by no means slow and his method of dribbling has long been the envy of noted athletes. Given a high ceiling his rainbow shot will scare any team.

Supporting Langenslein in the lineup of the masculine felines will be Emil Yde, mainstay of Freeport an all around scholar, having played baseball in the Three-Eye league last summer with Cedar Rapids. He's a pitcher, and possesses the same "Poppy" Erickson, high school and amateur star of many campaigns, is as good a floor man as Rockford fans have seen in action anywhere. It has been more than a college reputation to put the ball in the cage, and by dint of hard work Erickson usually
